GAP exhibits original bookplates

Ex Libris, the current exhibit of the Guild of American Papercutters on display through November, features 25 original bookplate designs created by members of the Guild of American Papercutters. Four of the designs were selected as "people's choice" winners. The pieces selected through voting at Laurel Arts and the Mary S. Biesecker Public Library were created by Kathy Reed and Linda Peck (on the front cover) and Sarah Madison and Linda Emmerson (above.)

Ex Libris refers to a book owner's identification label that is usually pasted to the inside front cover of a book. Members of the Guild will receive bookplates made from the winning show entries.

Laurel Arts and the Guild of American Papercutters enjoy a great working relationship. In fact, The Philip Dressler Center for the Arts has been home to the Guild's National Museum since 2009.

Laurel Arts expands available gallery space to include Uptown Works

Sometimes you visit the gallery, and sometimes the gallery visits you! When cutting-edge and beautifully imagined co-working space, Uptown Works, opened in Somerset, Laurel Arts provided some unique and eclectic artwork from our collection to grace the walls.

Recently, Somerset County Artists Association joined this exciting collaboration! Members of Laurel Arts Gallery Committee removed the permanent collection pieces, and artists David Greene and Susan Wilson (both members of SCAA) brought new artwork to hang.

Laurel Arts would like to thank Uptown Works, SCAA, the artists, and the members of our Gallery Committee for their collaborative efforts in this program.

If you are in the area, be sure to checkout the artwork, the beautiful building that is Uptown Works, and possibly purchase one of the pieces on exhibit (yes, they are for sale!)

Exhibiting artist David Greene grew up in Ohio, attending Ashland College with majors in Art and English. After a stint in the Air Force, he worked at a mid-sized newspaper in north central Ohio. In 1975, he went to work at a large portrait photography studio, and in 1980, he opened his own portrait studio in the Rockwood area.

During the last eight years, David has expanded his art by going back to his college roots, playing with watercolor, acrylics and other mediums. Recently, he has produced many varied pieces on paper and canvas, some of which you can see at Uptown Works.

"Motion and emotion is my theme these days. Using my emotions, I apply the paint in a flowing effect that defines my feelings at the moment. The Covid-19 lockdown gave me the opportunity to experiment with my art. Recently some of my work is the result of my reactions to political events in this country. I attempt to put a lot of my passion in each piece that I create."

Susan Wilson attended high school in Pittsburgh. she has a BS in Art Education from Barton College in North Carolina and a MA in textiles and photography from IUP. She worked as a photojournalist from 1982-1995 at the Beaver County Times and the Tribune Review. From 1995-2017 she worked as a visual art teacher in the Laurel Highlands School District, Uniontown. She is currently working as an instructor at Laurel Arts, and is a member of the Gallery Committee, along with participating in the "Soup'ler Bowl" fundraiser.

The cyanotype process she often uses was developed in 1842 when photography techniques were being explored and invented. It is a non-silver technique using potassium ferricyanide and ferric ammonium citrate, and when they are mixed together and applied to a surface and dry the surface is light sensitive. Her negatives are the size of the image and placed on the surface of the fabric with a piece of glass on top and exposed to sunlight. The ultraviolet light exposes the image and then it is rinsed in vinegar and water. She tones, dyes, stuffs and embroiders her images.

They are displayed as quilts, framed pieces, sculptures and mixed media.

"It is through photography and fiber that I capture a moment in time and transform it to a tactile creation to share through art. Art has also been a vehicle that has helped me and my students work through life issues and the many changes and challenges that we face. My hope is that we all find the media that will help us work through and beyond obstacles to improve our lives and be a better person."

Photography Club welcomes new members

Laurel Highlands Photography Club started out as a small group of friends in 2010 and has grown into a group of over 50 active members. Members have had their work published in Somerset Magazine each month and in the annual Town Planner. Members are amateur and professional photographers of all ages who focus on growing their photography skills.

The group meets the first Tuesday and third Thursday of each month (September-June) at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, 1845 North Center Ave., Somerset. The club recently became an affiliate of Laurel Arts.

The club's end of the year project is done in conjunction with Somerset Historical Center and is entitled "Art in the Museum." It is a public photography contest; the club has had as many as 180 submissions in one contest year.

In the last year, the club welcomed several new members and branched out into some new adventures. Monthly meetings always include a learning experience. Last year a live video feed was added for those who cannot attend the meetings. This year a second monthly meeting was added. With a variety of outings and flexible dates the club hopes to better serve potential members.

We have also added community service opportunities to allow our members to learn while providing the community with needed photos. Members have provided Jennerstown Speedway, Mountain Craft Days/Somerset Historical Center, and Somerset County Fair (just to name a few) with photos they can use for marketing. These digital photos were provided free of charge. We are also looking for businesses willing to display our members' photos.

A beginner photography class provides instruction in a classroom setting. In the fall a four-week class was offered on Saturday mornings. Members are also planning to host one-day seminars that will allow those that cannot commit to 4 weeks to have the opportunity of an overview.

Anyone interested in photography is welcome to attend a meeting. For more information, email lhphotoclub@gmail.com or call club president Roslyn Pugh at 814-701-1170.

Rotarians, students from SASD spend a day fence-painting

On a beautiful (and brisk) Saturday morning, a crew of volunteers ascended upon the grounds of the Dressler Center to place a fresh coat of white paint on the fence that surrounds the property along both Tayman and Davis Avenue.

The project was spearheaded by members of the Rotary Club of Somerset and Laurel Arts with the hope of restoring the iconic fixture, supporting community-focused efforts, and promoting Rotary's motto of "Service Above Self."

In addition, students from the Somerset Area School District, members of the high school football team and the National Honor Society, brought brushes and went to work.

A special thanks to coaches Brian Basile, Jeff Urban, Sam Zambanini, Levi Cook, Dan Sivak, Jeff Rogish and Rick Flyte. Lowe's Home Improvement of Somerset donated the paint and additional supplies. Somerset Inc. connected us with student volunteers!

Rotarians Rita Halverson spearheaded the project, with the support of Ann Persun, current Rotary president, and Fred Rosemeyer and Sharon Clapper, both Rotarians and Laurel Arts board members.

The staff at Laurel Arts has worked tirelessly to enhance the natural beauty of the Dressler Center grounds and this project has served as such an integral part of the beautification process.

Words cannot truly describe the appreciation we have for our community, these volunteers, and the students. Our center is an even more beautiful place because of your efforts.

Mural depicts farm life, recreation, industry, history

Public art has the power to define a civic space, display the threads which bond a community, serve as a tool for activism, or simply create enjoyment for residents and visitors alike.

Laurel Arts is proud to be a part of the first mural installation in Uptown Somerset at the corner of West Patriot Street and South Center Avenue. This project was a collaborative effort of Laurel Arts, Somerset County Chamber of Commerce, Somerset Inc., and Somerset County Economic Development Council.

Special thanks to the sponsors and partners of this project: Somerset Trust Company, Somerset Jaycees, The Community Foundation for the Alleghenies, The Cambria City Cultural Partnership & 1889 Foundation. Thanks also to the Borough of Somerset and to Blue Sky Sign Co.

Christine Troll designed the artwork. Christine is 18 years old and the daughter of Suzanne and Charles Troll.

Christine said, "The first thing I do when I start thinking about drawing a picture is envision how I want it to make people feel when they look at it, and how I want that picture to affect them. The vast beauty of nature is so intense for me; it serves as the most poignant inspiration for my art. And then I go from there, developing how I achieve that response to my artwork. I sketch it out, and tweak the design, then I color it, trying to imitate the magnitude of the beauty that I find in nature."

Laurel Arts is proud to be able to tell a bit of the story of who we are, what we have endured, and what makes us "America's County."
